18. 다음 글의 목적으로 가장 적절한 것은?

To the Manager of Pet World:

One week ago, I purchased Pew dog food for my pet at your store. I was surprised at what happened when I opened the dog food at home. The dog food was rotten. Not realizing that, I fed it to my pet, and she became violently ill, vomiting for hours. I was forced to take her to the vet. After spending thousands of dollars, I realized that her sickness was due to the rotten dog food I had unknowingly fed her. I hope you'll make up for my financial burden related to this unfortunate incident. Please contact me as soon as possible at (998) 867－0987.

Sincerely,
John Jay

19. 다음 글에 드러난 Rebecca의 심경 변화로 가장 적절한 것은?

On her way home from work, Rebecca accidentally left her laptop computer on the subway. She only realized the mistake an hour later while eating dinner with her family. Rebecca hurried to the Lost & Found office in the subway station, filed a report, and returned home. Actually, she had given up hope of ever seeing her laptop again. At that moment she got a phone call from a stranger who had discovered her laptop computer on the subway and wanted to return it to her. After a thirty-minute cab ride to his neighborhood, she received her laptop back completely undamaged. She was really pleased to see it again.

⑤ disappointed → embarrassed

20. 다음 글의 요지로 가장 적절한 것은?

Psychologist Anders Ericsson has described how figure skaters practice differently on the ice: Olympic hopefuls work on skills they have not mastered yet. Club skaters, in contrast, work on skills they've already mastered. Amateurs tend to spend half of their time at the rink chatting with friends and not practicing at all. Put simply, skaters who spend the same number of hours on the ice achieve very different results because they practice in very different ways. In Ericsson's research, this finding has held true for every skill imaginable, including memorizing complex lists, playing chess, excelling at the violin, and conquering every sporting skill.

* hopeful: 우승을 노리는 선수

⑤ 연습에 임하는 태도의 차이가 차별화된 결과를 낳는다.

21. 다음 글의 주장으로 가장 적절한 것은?

Most animals do not do things as we do. However, that does not mean that we are better than they are. All living things on earth are valuable. Each knows and understands the world in his or her own way. We humans have unique capabilities that other animals lack. We can build cars, use computers, and fly airplanes. We can also think about abstract ideas, plan for the future, and worry about our taxes. But we cannot run as fast as cheetahs, see as well as hawks, swim like dolphins, or soar like eagles. So rather than thinking other animals are not as smart or capable as we are, we should realize that they are just different from us and accept it. Animals are certainly not less than humans.

① 인간의 신체적 한계는 기술의 발달로 극복 가능하다.
② 인간의 감정을 존중하듯 동물의 감정도 존중해야 한다.
③ 인간과 동물이 공존할 수 있는 다양한 방법이 존재한다.
④ 동물과 인간은 단지 다를 뿐이라는 사실을 깨달아야 한다.
⑤ 인간은 자신만의 방식으로 세상에 대한 인식을 넓혀야 한다.

22. 다음 글의 주제로 가장 적절한 것은?

Have you experienced that you feel a stronger craving for chocolate when you are having a bad day? The food we eat affects the way we think and feel throughout the day. It is sometimes called the 'food-mood connection': what we eat can affect how we feel. For example, eating omega 3 rich foods like nuts and fish may improve your mood as well as lower your cholesterol level. Consuming fresh and natural foods can help you become more calm. On the other hand, processed foods high in fat and salt often make you feel more moody. Also, drinking too much coffee or tea can make you feel anxious, nervous or depressed.

① how our body digests food
② how to maintain physical health
③ various causes of poor digestion
④ the importance of eating various foods
⑤ influences of dietary choices on emotions

23. 다음 글의 제목으로 가장 적절한 것은?

Compared to repeatedly reading, testing your knowledge for yourself can feel uncomfortable, especially when the new learning is hard to recall. It does not feel as productive as repeatedly reading your class notes feels. But there is something you don't sense when you're struggling to retrieve new learning. It is the fact that every time you work hard to recall a memory, you actually strengthen it. If you restudy something after failing to recall it, you actually learn it better than if you had not tried to recall it. The effort of retrieving knowledge strengthens its staying power and your ability to recall it in the future.

* retrieve: 다시 생각해 내다

27. Kobus leche에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

Kobus leche is an antelope found in Botswana, Zambia, northeastern Namibia, and eastern Angola. Kobus leche is found in wetlands, where they live on plants that grow in water. They use the knee-deep water as protection from predators. Their legs are covered in a waterproof substance which allows them to run quite fast in knee-deep water. The back legs are somewhat longer in proportion than those of other antelopes, to ease long-distance running in muddy soil. They gather in herds which can include many thousands of individuals. Herds are usually all of one gender, but during mating season they mix with the other gender.

① 물에서 자라는 식물을 먹고 산다.
② 물을 이용해 포식자로부터 자신을 보호한다.
③ 무릎 깊이의 물에서 빨리 달릴 수 있다.
④ 뒷다리가 다른 영양들에 비해 비율상 짧다.
⑤ 무리는 짝짓기 시즌이 아니면 보통 동성끼리 모인다.

On the wall across from my desk, there are pictures of people important to me. There's also a picture of my wife, Margaret, which was (A) [taken / taking] on a trip to Europe years ago; a picture of Joel Porter, my son, standing with me next to a monument of John Wesley in England. As I look at them, I am constantly reminded of what's most important in my life. On the right side of my desk (B) [is / are] file folders containing the main lectures I will be giving this year. I like to keep them close so that I can continually update them and refer to them. The ones for events (C) [that / what] I will be leading in the next two weeks are in yellow folders so that I can pay additional attention on them.

	(A)	(B)	(C)
①	taken	is	that
②	taken	is	what
③	taken	are	that
④	taking	is	that
⑤	taking	are	what

29. (A), (B), (C)의 각 네모 안에서 문맥에 맞는 낱말로 가장 적절한 것은?

When you are doing something, time is not the only important thing. The energy we give also (A) [matters / weakens]. If a parent goes to watch their kid's soccer game but only looks up from their cellphone, they may have devoted their time, but they haven't devoted their energy. The kid will find their parent's head down most of the game, busy texting someone. Without giving their (B) [attention / reward], the time is basically thrown away for both parent and child. The same is true in our offices when we talk to someone while reading our e-mails. We may be hearing everything, but the person speaking will not think so. As a result, an opportunity to build trust is (C) [wasted / found].

Quite often my colleagues agree to the importance of action in learning, but for the wrong reason. They might say something like, "You are right. Students are learning by what ①they do and how they perform on tests or in discussions." ②Their actions, especially performance on tests, can be misleading to educators. Teachers may want ③their students to learn or even memorize the actions. This may lead ④them to do what their teachers require, but without their own understanding. Or it may lead them to refuse to risk demonstrating ⑤their own knowledge out of insecurity.

31. Do you travel to work by your car? If not, by train or by bus? Does the travel mode make a difference to your _____? An analysis compared people going to work by a private vehicle with those traveling to work by public transportation. The results showed that people traveling to work by train had lower levels of life satisfaction than those using a private vehicle. The public transportation users were also less likely to feel that their daily activities were pleasing on average. Besides, they recorded higher anxiety levels on average than those who traveled in a private vehicle. It may not come as a surprise to anyone who's experienced squeezing into a packed train on their way to work.

① character ② happiness
③ health ④ intelligence
⑤ success

32. Many activities are enjoyable and beneficial when _____. We all need time to become relaxed, to go through a magazine or stare at the TV for a while, to surf the Internet, enjoy a snack, and so on. But more is not always better. We may have too much of a good thing. The occasional scoop of ice cream may be good for the soul; a glass of red wine may be good for the heart. But three scoops of ice cream at night is a guaranteed route to obesity; three glasses of wine every evening is a sure-fire cause of liver damage. [3점]

* obesity: 비만

① learned in detail
② planned in advance
③ done with close friends
④ consumed in small quantities
⑤ performed without disturbance

33. From the moment a boy is born and throughout his life, it's important that he gets the message that _____. With an infant, this means we need to acknowledge all of the feelings the baby expresses. Rather than forcing him to constantly smile or laugh, we also need to show him we're receptive to his sadness, fear, or other painful emotions. So when a young infant begins to frown, kick, or cry, rather than trying to "cheer him up" or "smooth things over" by making happy faces at him, let him know you understand how he's feeling. Show him with your words, facial expressions, and gestures that you respect and understand his genuine feelings. [3점]

① all of his emotions are sincere
② things are not divided by gender
③ actions speak louder than words
④ he is not allowed to be imperfect
⑤ he is born with everything he needs

34. Psychologists do not use criticism to influence children. They use guidance. In criticism parents attack children's personality attributes and their character. In guidance we _____. We say nothing to the child about himself/herself. When eight-year-old Mary accidentally spilled her juice, her mother commented calmly. "I see the juice spilled. Let's get another glass of juice, and a sponge." She got up and handed the juice and the sponge to her daughter. Mary cleaned up the table while her mother helped her. She did not add cutting comments or useless warnings. [3점]

* attribute: 속성, 특성

① focus on a different character trait
② also learn a lot from their mistakes
③ try to praise them as much as possible
④ expose them to many different situations
⑤ state the problem and a possible solution

> Rejection can be defined as the act of minimizing the value of a relationship with another person. The definition is a bit abstract, so please allow me to explain it.

(A) For example, if Julie turns down Mike's request for a date, she is minimizing the value of a relationship with Mike.

(B) When I say "minimize the value of a relationship," it means someone does something that indicates to you that he or she cares less about the relationship than you.

(C) Also, she is clearly indicating that she values the relationship to a lesser degree than Mike does, which is considered a form of rejection.

There was a hunter who had a special breed of "bird dog." The dog was the only one of its kind, as it could walk on water. One day he invited a friend to go hunting with him so that he could show off his prized possession. After some time, they shot a few ducks, which fell into the water. The man ordered his dog to fetch the birds. The dog ran on water to fetch them. The man expected _____ from his friend, but he did not get one. Being curious, he asked his friend if he had noticed anything unusual about the dog. The friend replied, "Yes, I did see something unusual about your dog. Your dog can't swim!"

Every day we have to face, work with, or even live with people who display more negative tendencies than positive ones. They are always complaining, criticizing, and talking about all the negatives in life. They are world champions in spreading fear, broadcasting gossip, or chasing people away; they choose to look at the holes in the middle rather than the whole doughnut. They are the people who won't pull you out of your present situation but rather push you down. So be aware of them, spend less time with them, and do not let them steal your dreams away from you.

In April 1952, Alice, my first daughter, was 11 years old and in the sixth grade at William Cleveland Elementary School. (a) Her teacher was Ada Pemberton. That year, there was a spelling bee in the city. Students were preparing for the classroom spelldowns. They would lead to a schoolwide contest and eventual qualification for the citywide bee, where school winners competed for the honor of being the spelling champion of Houston.

(B)

After each practice, Ms. Pemberton would take her to Rettig's ice cream parlor. They practiced every weekend until the citywide spelling bee with all the school champions from the Houston Independent School District. Alice did not win the citywide bee, but she still felt proud to have participated. (b) She also felt grateful that she had such a caring teacher in elementary school.

(C)

The day before the classroom spelling bee, my youngest son was playing with matches and accidentally set a fire in our apartment. Fortunately, the fire was put out soon with the help of the quick fire fighters. I called the school in the next morning to inform Ms. Pemberton of the accident, knowing that the class spelling bee was that day. When Alice arrived at school, Ms. Pemberton pulled (c) her aside.

(D)

(d) She asked if Alice wanted the spelling bee to be postponed to another day. Alice told her no. That day, she won the bee for her classroom. The next week was the school spelling bee, with classroom champions competing. (e) She won again! The citywide spelling bee was one month away. Every Sunday, Ms. Pemberton would pick up Alice, and they would go to her house, where she would help Alice practice by calling out spelling words.
